Your system will get slower and less efficient with time That's where utility software springs into action.. Just like with any other item, computers also need a lot of maintenance, in order to keep running at their best capacity.. There are apps that clean up your junk files from your Mac and free up the space on your hard drive.. Others may detect apps that are running unnecessary in the background, slowing down your system and help you optimize it.

The list goes on... All computers usually come with built-in utility tools and Macs make no exception.. While some of them can be tested for free and don't cost you anything, a lot of them are paid apps, so you should be careful what you pay for.. No matter how good the components are and how new, fast and powerful your computer is when you first purchase it, it's not going to stay like that forever.. However, you shouldn't expect miracles from any program Although you will experience an increase in performance after using them, none of them has the ability to make your computer behave like it is brand new again.
